Sacrifice. Undoubtedly a topic discussed and celebrated this weekend at churches across the nation and around the world. Every time we gather as a body of believers we celebrate the one who “did not come to be served, but to serve and to give His life as a ransom for many.” However, this weekend, sacrifice received additional attention. Sunday marked the 21st anniversary of 9/11; a day on which men and women in uniform rushed toward danger in order to help those caught in the middle of it. From that day until this one, we still count the lives given in support and protection of this great nation.

Freedom in this country enables everyone to choose a preferred profession, and if necessary, accept the difficulties and dangers that accompany it – sacrifice in service to others. Working in schools for the better part of twenty years has left me with a great and growing appreciation of both the Pledge of Allegiance and The Star-Spangled Banner. Both speak of sacrifice, whether directly or indirectly, and both serve as a reminder of that which makes this nation great: commitment to community and service to the Savior. “Thank you” to all who sacrifice, who choose to follow the example of Christ, not coming to be served, but to serve.
