In the rafters of Rupp Arena in Lexington, Kentucky hang banners that commemorate the championship seasons of the past. Each banner serves as a reminder of the students who rose above the competition for that particular season. In the gym of HCA hang banners that celebrate championship seasons, banners that recognize individual honors, and banners that show the many ways that the community supports the athletic programs. In the lobby of HCA stands a bulletin board that highlights students excelling in so many ways – through service, through the arts, through academics.

Along with Christ-like character development, student achievement defines the purpose of HCA: achievement in the classroom, achievement in the community, and achievement on the court or course or field or range.

This past week, several Heritage students competed for the middle school academic team and earned recognition for their performance. These students both placed individually in the competition and will advance to the regionals competition: Cash Bolinger in Social Studies, Mekena Dalke (Science), Lincoln Blanchard (Language Arts), Jace Ritli (both Language Arts and Composition), and Magen Fleming (Arts and Humanities).

Over the weekend, Jazzy Blanchard was recognized at the state Beta Club Convention in the category of Hand Drawn Anime for a piece of art that she created.

Also, in the past week, the varsity boys' basketball team won the first two rounds of the All "A" regional tournament, defeating Livingston County and Dawson Springs.

It is exciting to be part of a school that offers so many different ways for students to demonstrate their passions and be recognized for their achievements. Commitment to and support for these efforts enable students from HCA to receive an education that creates well-rounded students, who then have opportunities to turn those experiences into ways in which they serve Christ after leaving this campus. To God be the glory!
